

Skanska promotes Coster to Green Business Officer, Farland to Senior VP and Mission Critical Leader

PARSIPPANY, NJ – April 25, 2013 – Skanska USA's building construction unit announced new roles for two of its market sector leaders.

John Coster, previously a vice president within Skanska's Mission Critical Center of Excellence (COE), is being promoted to the newly-created role of Green Business Officer. Coster will help drive Skanska's position as a leader in delivering innovative solutions to clients in new and existing facilities across the U.S. in need of cost-effective energy efficient and environmentally sustainable building solutions.

Additionally, Bryant Farland is being promoted to Senior Vice President, Account Manager and Mission Critical COE Leader, moving from his previous role within Skanska's Design-Build COE. Farland has been a key contributor on every major Skanska USA Building Mission Critical project over the past five years as Skanska has expanded its focus and presence in this sector.

"These promotions align our expertise with the services the market is asking for," said Skanska USA Building President & CEO Bill Flemming. "John and Bryant combine passion about their market sectors and an understanding of the big-picture business needs of our clients that allows Skanska be a true business partner for clients in the industries they serve."

Jake Carnemark, who headed the Mission Critical COE is leaving Skanska to focus more broadly on the mission critical sector and will continue to work closely with Skanska to develop data center opportunities.

"Jake has done an outstanding job representing Skanska in the Mission Critical sector," said Flemming. "We greatly appreciate Jake's service and look forward to continuing to work with him as a valued strategic partner."
