Skanska's Portage Office Awarded Kalamazoo/Battle Creek International Airport New Terminal

Portage, Mich. – Skanska USA Building Inc. announced today that it has been awarded a $35 million contract to construct a new terminal building for the Kalamazoo/Battle Creek International Airport in Kalamazoo, Mich., which is scheduled to open in April 2011.

The 90,000 square-foot terminal, which will support five new gates and passenger bridges, will include a passenger queuing and ticketing area; rental car and vendor space; and baggage handling and tug drive-through area. It also will include a security screening section, Transportation Security Administration offices, and administration and security offices for airport personnel.

“This new terminal means a great deal for both Kalamazoo and Battle Creek – enhancing the region’s overall travel experience, as well as carrier capacity. We’re thrilled to provide our expertise and knowledge to this important project,” said Kirk Frownfelter, executive vice president, area general manager for Skanska’s Midwest operations.

In June, the terminal celebrated its groundbreaking with a ceremony attended by U.S. Sens. Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow of Michigan, and U.S. Rep. Fred Upton of Michigan.
